Disc Makers Brings CD Duplication to the Web

Disc Makers, a leading independent media manufacturer, recently launched CD Self Service, an interactive Web service that gives its clients the chance to create their own CDs and place short-run duplication orders online from the convenience of their home or office.

CD Self Service offers CD-R duplication and printing for projects of 500 CDs or less with no minimum order and includes free online storage of audio and visual content, full-color on-disc printing and inserts, Web-based 24/7 ordering and a choice of five packaging options.

CD Self Service provides a 48-hour turnaround time on all orders. The CDs are backed by the same money-back guarantee Disc Makers' Web-based CD Self Service offers 24/7 ordering for design, duplication, printing and packaging of projects of 500 CDs or less.

as all Disc Makers' other CD packages.

In business since 1959, Disc Makers offers a wide variety of products and services, including state-of-the-art automated printers and duplicating systems as well as complete CD and cassette packages for independent artists, record labels and businesses.

The company's facilities are outfitted with the latest graphic, printing and CD/DVD duplication equipment and products, as well as in-house studios for mastering and post-production.

The company also offers a variety of additional services including custom design, packaging, distribution and financing, and produces the Independent Music World Series, a showcase series for independent musicians.

Disc Makers has a manufacturing plant in Pennsauken, NJ and one in Fremont, CA, plus four regional offices located in New York City, Los Angeles, Tukwila, WA (near Seattle) and Puerto Rico.
